HO'NEY-BAG. n. f. [honey and bag.]

The honey-bag is the stomach, which they always fill to satisfy, and to spare, vomiting up the greater part of the honey to be kept against Winter. Grew's Museum.

HO'NEY-COMB. n. f. [honey and comb.] The cells of wax in which the bee stores her honey.

All these a milk-white honey-comb surround,
Which in the midst the country banquet crown'd. Dryden.

HO'NEY-COMBED. adj. [honey and comb.] Spoken of a piece of ordnance flawed with little cavities by being ill cast.

A mariner having discharged his gun, which was honey-combed, and loading it suddenly again, the powder took fire. Wifeman.

HO'NEY-DEW. n. f. [honey and dew.] Sweet dew.

There is a honey-dew which hangs upon their leaves, and breeds insects. Mortimer's Husbandry.

How honey-dews embalm the fragrant morn,
And the fair oak with luscious sweets adorn. Garth.

HO'NEY-FLOWER. n. f. [melanthus, Latin.] A plant.

It hath a perennial root, and the appearance of a shrub: the leaves are like those of burnet; the cup of the flower is divided into several parts: the flower consists of four leaves, and is of an anomalous figure, sometimes in the shape of a fan, and at other times conical: the ovary becomes a fruit, resembling a bladder four cornered, divided into four cells, and pregnant with roundish seeds. This plant produces large spikes of chocolate-coloured flowers in May, in each of which is contained a large quantity of black sweet liquor, from whence it is supposed to derive its name. Miller.

HO'NEY-GNAT. n. f. [melio, Latin; honey and gnat.] An insect. Ainsworth.

HO'NEY-MOON. n. f. [honey and moon.] The first month after marriage, when there is nothing but tenderness and pleasure.

A man should keep his finery for the latter season of marriage, and not begin to dress till the honey-moon is over. Addis.

HO'NEY-SUCKLE. n. f. [caprifolium, Latin.] Woodbine.

It hath a climbing stalk, which twists itself about whatever tree stands near it: the flowers are tubulous and oblong, consisting of one leaf, which opens towards the top, and is divided into two lips; the uppermost of which is subdivided into two, and the lowermost is cut into many segments: the tube of the flowers is bent, somewhat resembling a huntman's horn. They are produced in clusters, and are very sweet. Miller enumerates ten species, of which three grow wild in our hedges.

Bid her steal into the pleached bower,
Where honey-suckles, ripen'd by the sun,
Forbid the sun to enter; like to favourites,
Made proud by princes, that advance their pride
Against the power that bred it. Shakespeare.

Watch upon a bank
With ivy canopied, and interwove
With flaunting honey-suckle. Milton.

Then mello beat, and honey-suckles pound;
With these alluring favours strew the ground. Dryd. Virgil.

HO'NEYLESS. adj. [from honey.] Without honey.

But for your words, they rob the Hybla bees,
And leave them honeyless. Shakespeare, Julius Caesar.

HO'NEY-WORT. n. f. [leontine, Latin.] A plant.

It hath glaucous deep green leaves, which are, for the most part, beset with prickles: the flowers are cylindrical, consisting of one leaf, in shape like those of comfrey, and are pendulous: each flower turns to the top of the second page of the third leaf following. Miller.

HO'NORARY. adj. [honorarius, Latin.]

1. Done in honour.

There was probably some distinction made among the Romans between such honorary arches erected to emperors, and those that were raised to them on the account of a victory, which are properly triumphal arches. Addis on Italy.

This monument is only honorary; for the ashes of the emperor lie elsewhere. Addis on Italy.

2. Conferring honour without gain.

The Romans abounded with these little honorary rewards, that, without conferring wealth and riches, gave only place and distinction to the person who received them. Addis Guard.

HO'NOUR. n. f. [honore, French; honor, Latin.]

1. Dignity; high rank.

2. Reputation; fame.

A man is an ill husband of his honour, that entereth into any action, the failing wherein may disgrace him more than the carrying of it through can honour him. Bacon's Essays.

3. The title of a man of rank.

Return unto thy lord,
Bid him not fear the separated councils:
His honour and myself are at the one;
And at the other is my good friend Cateby. Shakef. R. III.

4. Subject of praise.

Thou happy father,
Think that the clearest gods, who make them honours
Of man's impossibilities, have preserv'd thee. Shakespeare.

5. Nobleness of mind; scorn of meannesses; magnanimity.

Now shall I see thy love; what motive may
Be stronger with thee than the name of wife?
—That which upholdeth him, that thee upholds,
His honour. Oh, thine honour, Lewis; thine honour. Shak.

If by honour is meant any thing distinct from confidence, 'tis no more than a regard to the censure and esteem of the world. Rogers's Sermons.

6. Reverence; due veneration.

They take thee for their mother,
And every day do honour to thy grave. Shakespeare, Cymbeline.

There, my lord,
The high promotion of his grace of Canterbury,
Who holds his state at door, 'mongst purfuivants.
—Ha! 'tis he, indeed!

Is this the honour they do one another? Shakespeare, Hen. VIII.

This is a duty in the fifth commandment, required towards our prince and our parent, under the name of honour; a respect, which, in the notion of it, implies a mixture of love and fear, and, in the object, equally supposes goodness and power. Rogers's Sermons.

7. Chastity.

Be she honour flav'd,
I have three daughters, the eldest is eleven;
If this prove true, they'll pay for't. Shak. Winter's Tale.

She dwells so securely on the excellency of her honour, that the folly of my soul dares not prevent itself: she is too bright to be looked against. Shakespeare, Merry Wives of Windsor.

8. Dignity of mien.

Two of far nobler shape, erect and tall,
Godlike erect! with native honour clad,
In naked majesty, seem'd lords of all. Milton's Parad. Lost.

9. Glory; boast.

A late eminent person, the honour of his profession for integrity and learning. Burton's Theory of the Earth.

10. Public mark of respect.

He saw his friends, who whelm'd beneath the waves,
Their funeral honour claim'd, and ask'd their quiet graves. Dryden's Æn. b. vi.

Such discourses, on such mournful occasions as these, were instituted not so much in honour of the dead, as for the use of the living.

Numbers engage their lives and labours, some to heap together a little dirt that shall bury them in the end; others to gain an honour, that, at best, can be celebrated but by an inconsiderable part of the world, and is envied and calumniated by more than 'tis truly given. Wake's Preparation for Death.

11. Privileges of rank or birth.

Henry the seventh, truly pitying
My father's loss, like a most royal prince,
Restor'd to me my honours; and, from ruins,
Made my name once more noble. Shakespeare, Henry VIII.

12. Civilities paid.

Then here a slave, or if you will a lord,
To do the honours, and to give the word. Pope's Horat.

13. Ornament; decoration.

The fire then took the honours of his head,
And from his brows damps of oblivion shed. Dryden.

My hand to thee, my honour on my promise. Shakespeare.

TO HO'NOUR. v. a. [honorer, French; honore, Latin.]

1. To reverence; to regard with veneration.

He was called our father, and was continually honoured of all men, as the next person unto the king. Esch. xvi. 11.

The poor man is honoured for his skill, and the rich man is honoured for his riches. Esch. x. 35.

He that is honoured in poverty, how much more in riches! Esch. x. 34.

2. To dignify; to raise to greatness.

How lov'd, how honour'd once, avails thee not. Pope.

3. To dignify; to raise to greatness.

In soothing them, we nourish 'gainst our senate
The cockle of rebellion, insolence, sedition,
Which we ourselves have plow'd for, sow'd and scatter'd,
By mingling them with us, the honour'd number. Shakespeare.

I will harden Pharaoh's heart, that he shall follow after them, and I will be honoured upon Pharaoh, and upon all his host, that the Egyptians may know that I am the Lord. Ex. xiv.

HO'NOURABLE. adj. [honorable, French.]

1. Illustrious; noble.

Sir, I'll tell you,
Since I am charg'd in honour, and by him
That I think honourable. Shakespeare's Winter's Tale.

Who hath taken this counsel against Tyre, the crowning city, whose merchants are princes, whose traffickers are the honourable of the earth? Jf. xxiii. 8.

2. Great; magnanimous; generous.

Think it thou it honourable for a nobleman
Still to remember wrongs. Shakespeare's Coriolanus.

3. Conferring honour.

Then warlike kings, who for their country fought,
And honourable wounds from battle brought. Dryden's Æn.

I was

HOO

Many of those persons, who put this honourable talk on me, were more able to perform it themselves. Dryden's Dufresnoy.

4. Accompanied with tokens of honour.

Sith this wretched woman overcome,
Of anguish, rather than of crime hath been,
Preserve her cause to her eternal doom;
And in the mean, vouchsafe her honourable tomb. Fa. Qu.

5. Not to be disgraced.

Here's a Bohemian tartar carries the coming down of thy fat woman:—let her descend, my chambers are honourable. Shak.

6. Without taint; without reproach.

As he was honourable in all his acts, so in this, that he took Jospe for an haven. Mac. xiv. 5.

7. Honest; without intention of deceit.

The earl sent again to know if they would entertain their pardon, in case he should come in person, and assure it: they answered, they did conceive him to be so honourable, that from himself they would most thankfully embrace it. Hayward.

8. Equitable.

Thy purpose marriage, send me word to-morrow. Shakespeare.

HO'NOURABLENESS. n. f. [from honourable.] Eminence; magnificence; generosity.

HO'NOURABLY. adv. [from honourable.]

1. With tokens of honour.

The rev'rend abbot,
With all his convent, honourably receiv'd him. Sh. H. VIII.

2. Magnanimously; generously.

After some six weeks distance of time, which the king did honourably interpose, to give space to his brother's intercession, he was arraigned of high treason, and presently after condemned. Bacon's Henry VII.

3. Reputably; with exemption from reproach.

'Tis just, ye gods! and what I well deserve:
Why did I not more honourably starve! Dryden's Juvenal.

HO'NOURER. n. f. [from honour.] One that honours; one that regards with veneration.

I must not here omit to do justice to Mr. Gay, whose zeal in your concern is worthy a friend and honourer. Pope.

HOOD, in composition, is derived from the Saxon hob, in German heit, in Dutch heid. It denotes quality; character; condition: as, knighthood, childhood, fatherhood. Sometimes it is used after the Dutch, as maidenhood. Sometimes it is taken collectively: as, brotherhood, a confraternity; sisterhood, a company of sisters.

HOOD. n. f. [hob, Saxon, probably from hobos, head.]

1. The upper covering of a woman's head.

In velvet, white as snow, the troop was gown'd;
Their hoods and sleeves the same. Dryden's Fables.

2. Anything drawn upon the head, and wrapping round it.

Undertaking to getture and muffle up himself in his hood, as the duke's manner was to ride in cold weather, that none should discern him. Watson.

The lacerna came, from being a military habit, to be a common dress: it had a hood, which could be separated or joined to it. Arbutnot on Coins.

3. A covering put over the hawk's eyes, when he is not to fly.

4. An ornamental fold that hangs down the back of a graduate, to mark his degree.

TO HOOD. v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To dress in a hood.

The cobbler apron'd, and the parson gown'd,
The friar hooded, and the monarch crown'd. Pope.

2. To blind, as with a hood.

While grace is saying, I'll hood mine eyes
Thus with my hat, and sigh, and say, amen. Shakespeare.

3. To cover.

An hollow crystal pyramid he takes,
In firmament waters dipt above;
Of it a broad extinguisher he makes,
And hoods the flames that to their quarry strove. Dryden.

HO'ODMAN'S BLIND. n. f. A play in which the person hooded is to catch another, and tell the name; blindman's buff.

What devil was't,
That thus hath cozen'd you at hoodman blind? Shak. Hamlet.

TO HO'OD-WINK. v. a. [hood and wink.]

1. To blind with something bound over the eyes.

They willingly hood-wink themselves from seeing his faults, he often abused the virtue of courage to defend his foul vice of injustice. Sidney.

We will bind and hood-wink him so, that he shall suppose he is carried into the league of the adversaries. Shakespeare.

You may

Convey your pleasures in a spacious plenty,
And yet seem cold, the time you may so hood-wink. Shakespeare.

Then the who hath been hood-wink'd from her birth,
Doth first herself within death's mirror see. Davies.

So have I seen, at Christmas sports, one lost,
And, hood-wink'd, for a man embrace a post. Ben. Johnson.

Many of those persons, who put this honourable talk on me, were more able to perform it themselves. Dryden's Dufresnoy.

4. Accompanied with tokens of honour.

Sith this wretched woman overcome,
Of anguish, rather than of crime hath been,
Preserve her cause to her eternal doom;
And in the mean, vouchsafe her honourable tomb. Fa. Qu.

5. Not to be disgraced.

Here's a Bohemian tartar carries the coming down of thy fat woman:—let her descend, my chambers are honourable. Shak.

6. Without taint; without reproach.

As he was honourable in all his acts, so in this, that he took Jospe for an haven. Mac. xiv. 5.

7. Honest; without intention of deceit.

The earl sent again to know if they would entertain their pardon, in case he should come in person, and assure it: they answered, they did conceive him to be so honourable, that from himself they would most thankfully embrace it. Hayward.

8. Equitable.

Thy purpose marriage, send me word to-morrow. Shakespeare.

HOO

Satan is fain to hood-wink those that are apt to start. Decay of Piety.

Prejudice so dexterously hood-winks mens minds as to keep them in the dark, with a belief that they are more in the light. Locke.

Must I wed Rodogune?
Fantastick cruelty of hood-wink'd chance! Rowe.

On high, where no hoarse winds or clouds resort,
The hood-wink'd goddess keeps her partial court. Garth.

2. To cover; to hide.

Be patient; for the prize, I'll bring thee to,
Shall hood-wink this mischance. Shakespeare's Tempest.

3. To deceive; to impose upon.

She delighted in infamy, which often she had used to her husband's shame, filling all mens ears, but his, with reproach; while he, hood-winked with kindness, least of all men knew who struck him. Sidney.

HOOF. n. f. [hoo, Saxon; hoef, Dutch.] The hard horny substance on the feet of graminivorous animals.

With the hoofs of his horses shall he tread down all thy streets. Ezek. xxvi. 11.

The bull and ram know the use of their horns as well as the horse of his hoofs. More's Ant. date against Atheism.

HO'OFED. adj. [from hoof.] Furnished with hoofs.

Among quadrupeds, the roe-deer is the swiftest; of all the hoofed, the horse is the most beautiful; of all the clawed, the lion is the strongest. Grew's Cosmol. Sac. b. ii. c. 8.

HOOF-BOUND. adj. [hoof and bound]

A horse is said to be hoof-bound when he has a pain in the forefoot, occasioned by the dryness and contraction or narrowness of the horn of the quarters, which straitens the quarters of the heels, and oftentimes makes the horse lame. A hoof-bound horse has a narrow heel, the sides of which come too near one another, inasmuch that the flesh is kept too tight, and has not its natural extent. Farrier's Dict.

HOOK. n. f. [hoo, Saxon; hoeck, Dutch.]

1. Anything bent so as to catch hold: as, a shepherd's hook and pot hooks.

This falling not, for that they had not far enough undermined it, they assayed with great hooks and strong ropes to have pulled it down. Knolles.

2. The curved wire on which the bait is hung for fishes, and with which the fish is pierced.

Like unto golden hook,
That from the foolish fish their baits do hide. Spenser.

My bended hook shall pierce
Their slimy jaws. Shakespeare, Ant. and Cleopatra.

Though divine Plato thus of pleasures thought,
They us with hooks and baits, like fishes, caught. Denham.

3. A snare; a trap.

A shop of all the qualities that man
Loves woman for, besides that hook of wiving,
Fairness, which strikes the eye. Shakespeare, Cymbeline.

4. A sickle to reap corn.

Pease are commonly reaped with a hook at the end of a long stick. Mortimer's Husbandry.

5. An iron to seize the meat in the caldron.

About the caldron many cooks accoil'd,
With hooks and ladders, as need did require;
The while the viands in the vessel boil'd. Fairy Queen, b. ii.

6. Any instrument to cut or lop with.

Not that I'd lop the beauties from his hook,
Like flashing Bentley with his desperate hook. Pope.

7. The part of the hinge fixed to the post: whence the proverb, off the hooks, for in disorder.

My doublet looks,
Like him that wears it, quite off o' the hooks. Cleaveland.

8. Hook. [In husbandry.] A field sown two years running. Ains.

9. Hook or Crook. One way or other; by any expedient; by any means direct or oblique.

Which he by hook or crook</
